Sermon Discussion

Some churches talk about money too much, and others don't talk about it at all. Where do you think our church fits on the spectrum?

Let me summarize the Bible's teachings on poverty and wealth. Discuss.

1. Material possessions are a good gift from God meant for his people to enjoy.
2. Material possessions are simultaneously one of the primary means of turning human hearts away from God.
3. A necessary sign of a life in the process of being redeemed is that of transformation in the area of stewardship.
4. There are certain extremes of wealth and poverty that are, in and of themselves, intolerable.
5. Above all, the Bible's teaching about material possessions is inextricably intertwined with more 'spiritual' matters.

It's not easy to face affluence every day without committing idolatry or succumbing to ingratitude. It is a great temptation for the rich to be defined by their wealth—in their own eyes no less than in others'. Jesus himself talked about "the deceitfulness of wealth" (Mark 4:19). There is something intrinsically deceptive about wealth. What makes wealth so deceitful?

Jesus often taught that money isn't merely external but a window into our hearts (e.g., the Rich Young Ruler, Mark 10:17–22). James echoes that our attitude toward wealth reveals the state of our hearts before God (James 1:9, 5:4–5). What does your use of money reveal about you? How often do you think about money? How much anxiety do you have about money?

James insists that the rich believer should find humility and the poor should boast in their riches. How might you forget the gospel and based your pride and confidence (or lack of it) on your circumstances.
